DCI Nonproliferation Center

The Director of Central Intelligence Nonproliferation Center serves as the focal point for Intelligence Community nonproliferation analysis and supports the policy, enforcement, and licensing communities. The Center has a broad nonproliferation mission covering the worldwide development or acquisition of production technology, designs, components, or complete military systems in the areas of mass destruction and advanced conventional weaponry. The Nonproliferation Center is under the DCI and is supported administratively by the Office of Scientific and Weapons Research in the Directorate of Intelligence. It began operations on 17 September 1991.
